

German Course for Partners: “Everyday Communication in German“

Your partner is an international researcher at RWTH Aachen University and you are looking for a German course for beginners?

The Welcome Center for International Researchers invites you to this semester's course “Everyday Communication in German” starting Friday November 4, 2016. By the end of the course you will have basic oral and written communication skills that enable you to employ simple sentences and expressions when dealing with various situations in daily life (at the supermarket, in public offices, at the doctor's...) and especially when expressing wishes and attending to personal needs. Furthermore, you will be able to talk about yourself and your family and ask others about personal details, work, hobbies, and interests.

The number of participants is limited to 20. Free childcare for children up to age 6 will be provided by the Family Services Center upon binding registration. However, as spots are limited, do so as soon as possible! Childcare is provided at the childcare room of Faculty 1, Templergraben 64, opposite the Main Building of RWTH Aachen University.

There will be a mandatory placement test during a first get-together on October 26, 2016, from 9-11am. Childcare will be provided during this time. Please note that only beginners will be admitted to the course. If you have registered for childcare, bring your child/ren so that they get to know the childminders. Details on course dates and the required course book will be provided during this get-together as well.

The course fee is 60 €. It is to be paid in cash during the first lesson on November 4, 2016. Please note that the fee does not include the course book!
